

PRICELESS AMERICAN HONEY

There once lived a huge hive of honeybees located high up in a mighty oak tree deep in the Emerald Forest. Each day the honeybees would go out and gather the precious nectar they needed to have in order to make their sweet golden honey.

The honeybees guarded their precious honey with their lives, then a colony of red ants put together an evil plan to steal the honey from the honeybees. Their sinister plan was to slowly convince the defenders of the hive that they were not as strong as they thought they were, The red ants began to convince each of the honeybees to only look out for themselves and the honey wasn't as valuable as they thought it was and the honey wasn't worth risking their lives over. They were told life was too short to risk dying for the sake of others.

Soon the honeybees became alienated and self-serving and selfish, soon each of the honeybees were only out for themselves and they began hoarding the honey and hiding it only for themselves and with this alienation n selfishness came the fear in realizing they were now each on their own with no collective protection.

Now the red ants saw their chance to invade the honeybee hive and steal the golden honey and enslave the Honeybees so the red ants could have all the delicious golden honey they wanted....

Sound familiar? The Honeybees represent the American people and the valuable honey represents our CIVIL RIGHTS and FREEDOMS....

Collectively WE THE PEOPLE ARE AN UNSTOPPABLE FORCE
BUT INDIVIDUALLY we will one day be ENSLAVED...
